Clears Sinus Congestion and Inflammation

Does your child have chronic sniffles and cold symptoms that never seem to go away? It could be his sinuses. One of the most common chronic health problems in the United States, even among children, is chronic and reoccurring sinus inflammation.

The sinuses are four cavity areas in the bones around the nose, cheeks, and eyes that help circulate air throughout the nasal passages and are lined with mucous membranes that are designed to warm and moisten incoming air and filter out germs and irritants. When the sinuses don't drain properly, mucus accumulates, stagnates, and incubates those microorganisms and negatively influences health.

A child's on-going sinus problems can begin with an acute health challenge like a cold, but when a cold seems to continue after 7-10 days, chances are that the continuing problem is being exacerbated by germs and irritants (viruses, bacteria, molds, and/or fungi) lodged in the sinus cavities. This is because the sinus membranes weren't able to heal completely, causing the problem to become chronic.

Sinus problems can run the entire range from mildly unpleasant to extremely painful. Symptoms of chronic inflammation in the sinus cavities are pressure and pain around cheekbones and eyes, clogged nasal passages, thick, greenish-yellow nasal discharge, smell and taste diminishment, pounding pain, chronic pressure, sinus headaches, re-occurring problems with cold symptoms, post-nasal drip, general fatigue and malaise, poor immune function, and general head congestion.

Possible causes can be as varied as exposure to environmental allergens, irritants and pollution, tobacco smoke, respiratory infection, dental infections, food allergies and sensitivities, (especially to milk products) or a diet high in mucus forming foods, (such as dairy products, refined flours, chocolate, eggs, and fried/processed foods) and activities that cause pressure on sinuses (such as swimming, scuba diving, flying in planes). A common hidden cause of chronic sinus problems is mold and fungi in the sinus cavities, as well as systemic candida yeast imbalances.

To help reduce sinus problems, avoid giving your child mucous forming foods, sugar and fruit juices that feed yeast that is usually present in chronic sinusitis, and look for hidden food allergies as well as finding and eliminating other triggers in the environment.

Children's Sinus Relief by Cedar Bear Naturales® is an effective herbal formula that reduces mucus congestion and quickly relieves sinus swelling, stimulates lymphatic drainage, and dries and clears mucous discharges while it enhances immune functions to strengthen the body's defenses. Alcohol-free, good tasting, easy to use, and effective, Children's Sinus•Relief is a great way to clear up sinus related ongoing health problems and help your child feel good again.
